In my opinion, every student should do a part-time job or apply for a summer intern before graduate. Firstly, During the intern, we can learn a lot of things much more practical than what we learn in school. For example, a student of finance will put in many efforts in math while studying in school, but during the intern he/she will find the math formulas could do little help. Besides, we can check if we are really fit for the job we dreamed. Take me for instance, I dreamed to be a sales clerk in the supermarket when I was still a child. But when I really work as a sales cleark as my summer intern I found the work was tedious and tired.

I tend to agree that students having a one-year break before entering college. First of all, a long-term break will be beneficial for students both physically and mentally cuz many years of study and exams before college really cost energy, after graduating from high school,. 80.Should the university education be free?

I don't agree with the statement about university education for free. First of all, although it is a right for every student who needs education to enter into universities no matter he/she is rich or poor but free education can cause tension on teaching resources and available facilities. Without any charge of tuition for college students, universities will suffer a great budget and resources pressure. So under this circumstance, an essential measure should be taken by government such as intensify education funding to meet the demand of universities. Therefore I don't think it's wise to make university education for free but it is accessible for university to cut tuition.
